EAS Newsletter Editor Judith Russell Retiring!

Long time EAS newsletter editor Judith Russell has informed us that she must retire. Judi says that she has enjoyed doing the newsletter these many years but must now give it up. We will miss her very professional work and the energy and style she brought to this publication. If you should see Judi please join us in expressing our gratitude for her service! We can report that a new editor will be in place by September.

The National Audubon Society, National Geographic, BirdLife International, and the Cornell Lab of Ornithology, along with many local organizations like the Evansville Audubon Society are joining in a yearlong celebration of birds. Throughout the year we will be celebrating birds while raising awareness about their troubles.

Evansville Audubon Society will do our part by monthly programs along with content in this newsletter and on our website, evvaudubon.org. Additionally, you can find out what our national partners at National Audubon, National Geographic, BirdLife International, and the Cornell Lab will be doing by visiting their websites.

The call to action in April emphasized the importance of the Migratory Bird Treaty Act (MBTA) and recent threats to its continuing implementation to help migrating birds in the US, Mexico, and Canada. One hundred years ago, our country's most important bird protection law was signed. Since then, the Migratory Bird Treaty Act has saved countless birds' lives from human threats. Back then, hunters and poachers were the biggest concerns. Now, industrial hazards such as oil pits and power lines endanger birds daily. Thanks to the MBTA, industries had to work to prevent bird deaths caused by their activities and equipment.

Despite all of the MBTA's success, though, the Trump Administration and some in Congress are trying to weaken the law by giving a free pass to industries. From nefarious language in congressional bills to a damaging new interpretation of the Act, the MBTA is under attack. Under Trump's new directive the MBTA will no longer be applied to such events as the catastrophic Deepwater Horizon oil spill that destroyed or injured up to a million birds.

So, as migrants return to your yard this spring, don't just help them with bird seed and water. Speak up for the birds by showing your support for a strong Migratory Bird Treaty Act as well as check out all of the Year of the Bird Monthly Calls to Action link found under News and Events on our website, evvaudubon.org.

May 15, 2018, Attracting Butterflies to Your Garden

Landscape Lisa Hoffman Parks Programs Services Supervisor
John James Audubon State Park - Join Lisa Hoffman, Master Naturalist and Parks Programs Services Supervisor at Audubon State Park, for an informative presentation about butterflies. She will share some butterfly basics with us, including the roles butterflies play, and highlight threats to their existence. A look at some of our local butterflies will be included, as well as tips and information to consider when attracting butterflies to your garden sanctuaries.

June 19, 2018, Annual Meeting and Potluck

Join us at 6 PM (note time change) for election of new officers and directors followed by an indoor picnic potluck. Bring your own table service, drink of choice and a dish to share! Invite your friends and family to share good food and birding stories. (There will be no formal board meeting or program.)

Thanks to all the Jr. Birders, parents, and newcomers who joined us at Audubon State Park for a day of fun activities.

Tora and Canaan had a brief walk in the morning before the bird banding session. Although we didn't go far, we were able to see some nice birds around the parking lot at the museum. These included Yellow-throated Warbler, Northern Parula, Black-throated Green Warbler, Ruby-crowned Kinglet, and Blue-gray Gnatcatcher.

Several Jr. Birders and festival participants then got some hands on experience with banding and releasing birds. Several birds were banded, including Tufted Titmouse, Carolina Chickadee, Red-winged Blackbirds, White-breasted Nuthatch, Downy Woodpecker, and American Goldfinch.

After banding, some folks continued to enjoy festival activities like the live raptor show put on by the Talon Trust, a lecture by Sharon Sorenson on the common owls that occur in our area, or dissected owl pellets.

At 3 pm the Jr. Birders gathered again for a walk down warbler road. It was great to have families from as far away as Lexington, KY, join us on our hike. We were able to see some of the same birds that Tora and Canaan saw earlier in the day, but also added some species. Several people were able to get good views of the Scarlet Tanager. Other birds we saw were Turkey Vultures, Tufted Titmouse, Carolina Chickadee, Northern Cardinal, and Golden-crowned Kinglet.

To celebrate the Global Big Day on Saturday, May 5, 2018, the Jr. Birders had an outing to Eagle Slough. Despite the overcast skies the half mile hike from the parking lot to the observation deck was a huge success. The Jr. Birders officially recorded 55 species of birds that included many migrants, especially rich with warblers.

Of the species seen, several offered very good looks by the group including; bald eagle, a day roosting common nighthawk, blue-gray gnatcatcher, prothonotary warbler, common yellowthroat, hooded warbler, northern parula, American redstart, magnolia warbler, yellow warbler, palm warbler, and copious numbers of brown-headed cowbirds.

The Jr. Birders (and their parents) enjoyed a great outing and Evan received his Jr. Birder Eagle Optics t-shirt.

Jr. Birders also have great news to share about the American Kestrel nest boxes they built and placed at Bluegrass FWA a couple of years ago. One of the boxes has a clutch of 5 kestrel eggs!

We wish all of the Jr. Birders a good summer. The next outing will be in September – Jim and Mary Jo Campbell

National Audubon Renewal Notices, and Email Notices

The system that National Audubon uses to manage subscriptions is sending out notices that it's time to renew one's membership, when in actuality it might not be nearing that time. It's not uncommon for members to respond to these frequent reminders and end up paying for several years into the future. (We are working with National Audubon to try and address this situation.) Each member's actual expiration date is printed on the mailing label on the Evansville Audubon newsletter, so you can check your actual expiration date and ignore these early renewal reminders. If you have any question on your expiration date, you can contact Steve Heeger at sdheeger@sbcglobal.net or 812-499-0177.

Also, if you are not receiving the email notices on upcoming events and announcements, and would like to, or you would like to be removed from the distribution list, please use the above contact information.
